THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 10, 1880. Easy to Beat.

This promises to be a very easy presidential campaign. The Republican candidates are so handicapped by their records that there is little danger of their success: and what little now exists will be removed as soon as it is certain the Cincinnati convention has made judicious nominations against them. There is no telling in advance what degree of folly a political convention may be guilty of, as the Chicago convention has just demonstrated. So that until the one at river. Cincinnati has come and gone, it will not do to feel certain of the defeat of Garfield and Arthur. But surely we need not be very fearful that the Democratic delegates, with these candidates before them, will not have wisdom enough to oppose to them men of another | Twelfth Illinois district. sort, whose characters will command honest vote.

We really sympathize with the Republests. lican party that has been crucified in the cess with decent candidates. Even with of the Grand Army. Grant it need not have despaired, for he had positive elements of strength to off. set his points of weakness. Against Harrison, of Indiana, or Washburne, of Illinois, both strong and unassailable men, with elements about them appealing to the popular heart, no Democratic nominee could have felt certain of success. Against Garfield it will not be difficult to pit a Democrat of whose success we may feel nearly absolutely sure. The battle is lost to the Republican army before it is begun if the Democratic candidates are well-chosen. And we pity and heartily sympathize with the Republican politician who is bound to make his fight under such discouraging circumstances. It can not be an exciting contest when the enthusiasm of both sides is not aroused; and honest enthusiasm for such candidates as Garfield and Arthur is not possible.

The Republican party journals will stand by them with as stout hearts as they can command and will protest against what they will call Democratic calumny. They will undertake to persuade their readers that their candidates are virtuous and good, and that our charges against them are but campaign slanders. But it will not do, simply be cause the facts are too notorious and the evidence to prove them too abundant and plain. Garfield is not supposed to have profited as much as Blaine by the sale of his legislative influence, but he has been caught oftener and his offences can be more clearly proven. There was a possible chance for the Republican newspapers. if Blaine had been their candidate, to have made noise enough to persuade their voters that their man was being basely slandered; but there is no such chance for Garfield.

Some of the Republican papers are complaining that there has already been inaugurated "a campaign of abuse" against Garfield, as though the public record of their candidate for president was not public property. We have seen no personal abuse of Mr. Garfield in any Democratic paper, no intrusion into his priprivate character, further than it is reflected in the record of his public acts. By those acts, as they are indisputably recorded in the annals of American legtook the Credit Mobilier bribes and Ohio in October .- Times. lied about it he must expect to be reminded of it. If he took a $5,000 fee from a lobbying corporation to help their job through Congress, it is no unjustifiable abuse of him to spread his disgrace before the public. It would be better taste and better policy for the Republicans to try to controvert these charges than to complain of them. They are singularly silent concerning them. They attempt no denial, they make no justification, they can find no escape. Mr. Colfax when asked about the probable effect of the Credit Mobilier business turns his back upon the question. His party will have to do the same and will fitly die with its heels to the foe.

SENATOR KERNAN thinks that Garfield's nomination takes Thurman, Payne and Jewett out of the list of Democratic presidential possibilities. His very plausible reasoning is that the Democracy dare not put it to the test to win or lose it all on Ohio. To select a candidate from that state and pit him against Garfield would be to invite a decisive contest in October. The Democracy are not compelled to do that. They can make Ohio a doubtful state, but it is not by any means necessary to have it to elect the Democratic nominee. To lose it after such a contest as would be shaped over the candidacy of two Ohio men might exert a depressing influence on the Democracy elsewhere, the risk of which issue is an unnecessary one. Senator Kernan's head seems to be level on this point, though on the score of fitness and desert, Ohio is quite as prolific of Democratic favorite sons as she has been productive of Republican

In order that the office of collector of the port of New York-the most lucrative in our civil service-could be administered "honestly and efficiently" Hayes removed Chester A. That Gov. SEYMOUR will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination at Cincinnati, is firmly believed at Syracuse. On Conkling says that Grant could carry New York over any candidate. If I were nominated at Cincinnati I should carry New York, but I am not a candidate, for I do not think the nomination belongs to New York." This statement by the governor is by some persons received as an indication that he may be a candidate.

The character of Gen. Ganfield can be judged by the following conspicuous facts: When, in 1872, the Credit Mobillier bribery and corruption among members of Congress were first expossed, Gen. Garfield was one among those accused. He immediately publishing a letter expressly and possitively denying that he had any share in it. Next, on Jan. 14, 1873, he appeared before the committee of the House of Representatives, and under oath declared: " I never owned, received, or agreed to receive any stock of the Credit Mobillier, or of the Union Pacific railroad, nor any dividend or profits arising from either of them. But on Jan. 23, next following, the Hon. Oakes Ames was examined before the same committee, and proved by record evidence, partly in Gen. Garfield's own handwriting, that Gen. Garfield had had stock in the Credit Mobilier and that he had received dividends thereupon. Mr. Ames testified that Gener 1 Garfield had visited him subsequent to the commencement of the investigation by the House, and had endeavored to induce him to swear before committee that money thus paid him as dividends had been delivered to him as a loan; and yet at the very same time that he had endeavored to procure false testimony from Mr. Ames, Gen. Garfield had called upon Ames to pay him an additional sum of money on account of the Credit Mobilier, claiming that the dividends he had already received had not been as large as they should have been. EPISCOPAL CONVENTION. In Session at Reading.

The ninth annual convention of the die cese of Pennsylvania was opened in Christ cathedral, Reading, at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening. There were 54 clerical and 43 lay delegates present, and the building was occupied by a large audience to witness the opening ceremonies.

After the opening exercises Bishop Howe called the convention to order. R. A. Lamberton, of Harrisburg, was chosen secretary, and Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, of South Bethlehom, assistant secre-

Bishop Howe announced the standing committees, the Lancaster members being as follows: On claims of lay delegates to seats, S. H. Reynolds esq.; on canons, Rev. C. F. Knight.

Bishop Howe read his report of official visitations, which showed that during the year ending June 1st, 1880, he visited 130 places in his diocese, including 84 churches, some being visited twice—the distance traveled being about 6,000 miles. 722 persons were confirmed; 11 clergymen were ordained, and 11 transferred to other places. The bishop spoke highly of the behavior in church of several Indian chiefs at Carlisle, which decorum might, he said, be advantageously imitated by men of our own race. He confirmed 12 Indians as members of the church at Carlisle, where 286 young Indians are attending the U. S. government school. His report says that if the government would use the other military barracks in the country-some fifteen in number-as Indian school like that at Carlisle, there would be no need of the armies now used to harry the Indians across the plains." The chiefs present at the confirmation afterwards said that they desired their children and those of their people, sent to the "white-robed church." David B. Willson, of this city, a candidate for holy orders, is in attendance at the convention. The convention will meet daily from 9 a. m. to 12 m., and from 2:30 to 6 p. m. Yesterday morning Bishop Howe adninistered the holy communion to the members of the convention. The various subjects referred to in the bishop's address were given to the consideration of committees appointed respectively on the same. In the address occurs the following reference to a Lancaster institution: "I am happy to know that the reates institution for boys, at Lancaster, is still advancing in prosperity, and that the trustees are now engaged in erecting a commodious building for its use."

DRAMATIC BECORD What has Transpired on the Local Stage During the Late Season—Stars and

The amusement season in this city during the past nine months has been one of almost unexampled brilliancy. The following record includes every public entertainment that has been given at Fulton opera house during the period indicated, together with a statement of the character of the audiences. The season has been a remunerative one for the companies as well as for the owner and manager of the opera house, the good entertainments being generally well patronized, though there were some notable exceptions to this rule. The outlook for the coming season is quite promising; upwards of twenty-odd combinations, some of them of excellent calibre, having been already booked for appearance here. Below is presented a carefully compiled record extending from the opening to the close of the late season.

A Bad Place. On the southeast corner of the Dake street bridge is a rather dangerous opening. The circumference has not been measured, but a child might easily be admixted through while walking over or playing around the bridge and be precipitated to the railroad track below. We all know that children have broken limbs by falling a few feet. What would be the fate of one not smart enough to elude this trap? It would be interesting to know on whom devolves the duty of having this repaired. The police certainly do not spend much time on Duke street, nor do the judges pass along the neigh hood daily. They are extremely vigilant individuals (the boundary line of whose duty is not drawn at the court house steps) who would long ago have ordered a reparation. The lawyers and doctors passing to-and fro can be reasonably excused. The former can view this ineantious elephantine dilapidation with a selfish smile, because the spot may be the source of a future law-suit, and the latter, in case of an accident, would be afforded an opportunity to exercise their professional skill; but, to all apparent probabilities the victim, would have gone to where Lancaster judges, lawyers, street-commissioners and policemen may not be known. Dusty streets and uneven crossings may be disagreable enough, yet they are not emediately dangerous, but this Duke street what-is-it should have a treat of carpentering or masonry. A dumb-waiter would be beneficial improvement.

WHOSE IS IT?

A Vallse Found in the Little Conestoga. On Tuesday morning Edwin F. Huffnagle, son of George W. Huffnagle, found in the Little Conestoga creek near the Pennsylvania railroad bridge, a black oi. cloth valise, without handle, containing seven pairs of long woollen stockings, one pair of knit drawers, two pairs of shoes, a pair of gaiters, a pair of slippers, a steel toothed hair brush, a black leather drinking flask, a bottle of pomatum, a piece of chamois, three linen collars, two shirt fronts, a bird eye towel, a dark calico shirt, two neckties, and a gilt-edged Bible, bound in red morocco and having a gilt clasp. On a fly leaf in the Bible is the name of "Henry Gibbs, Manchester, 1878." As there are twenty-live or thirty Manchesters in the United States and several in England, it is not known which of them Henry Gibbs may belong to, nor what may have become of himwhether his body lies at the creek, or is safe and sound in some one of our many Manchesters. The contents of the valise are of good quality, but some them have been badly damaged by the water. Master Huffnagle took the valise and contents to the mayor's office, where they await identification and an owner. Pennsylvania State Pharmaceutical Associa-

This association met in annual convention on Tuesday in Allentown, and was called to order promptly at the time appointed, by the president, C. A. Heinitsh, esq., Laneaster Pa. The reports of the officers show marked progress in membership and interest. A number of new members were elected at this session; essays were read and a lecture delivered on the metric system. To-day the association takes an excursion over the Switchback railroad. The association contains 144 members scattered through fifty-two towns and cities and twenty-nine counties, with the follow ing officers: President, Charles A. Heinitsh, Lancaster; Vice Presidents, G. W. Kennedy, Pottsville, and G. A. Kelley, Pittsburgh; Treasurer, Joseph A. Miller, Harrisburg; Assistant Secretary, C. E. Klump, Allentown; Executive Committee, H. Bressler, Chambersburg, James A. Carlisle. The association was organ Tuesday, February 26, 1878, in Harrisburg. Mr. Randall Rickey, of Trenton, and Mr. Arthur G. Smith, of Belvidere, represented the state association of New Jersey at this
